A Note: According to the secret Order of the Commander of the Air Force No 19 from 18.03.1944 "...for specifying and recognizing of the shot down aircraft and registry of the air victories of the pilots and the fighter units", these definitions were given:

- “destruction /a destructive shot/” - when one multi-engine bomber aircraft, flying in a bomber formation, has been shot down;
“damaging /hitting or a hitting shot/” - when a multi-engine bomber aircraft, flying in a very large bomber formation, has been hit and as a result has left the formation, flying down or staying behind the others;
“shooting down /a shooting-down shot/” - shooting one already damaged by someone else, flying alone bomber aircraft, also for shooting down a fighter;

According to this the victories, given to the fighter pilots are:

For the destruction of a 4-engine bomber and for the shooting-down of a flying alone, not damaged before 4-engine bomber - 3 victories/points;

For the damaging of a 4-engine bomber - 2 victories/points;

For the destruction of a 2-engine bomber and for the shooting-down of a flying alone, not damaged before 2-engine bomber - 2 victories/points;

For the damaging of a 2-engine bomber - 2 points/points;

For the shooting down of an already damaged multi-engine bomber and for the shooting-down of a fighter - 1 victory/point.

Notes of Teodor Muchovski:

* Wrong, wrong, wrong! The story is known very well - he shot down one LIGHTNING - destroyed one of the engines. /The American pilot landed at a village near Pernik. When found, he was just sitting on his machine, smoking a cigarette/. Then Kjumjurdziev started an attack against the bomber formation. It is not clear if he managed to hit a bomber or not /lots different points of view at this point/, but then 6 /some say 8/ Lightning-s attacked him and he was killed in the combat. He crashed 200 m from the village Kalishta near Pernik.

 Not a mistake

 Actually, Konzov did shoot down the ‘Lightning’. The pilots remember this story: one day, not long after 09.09.44, a group of fighters were in the bar of the ‘Bulgaria’ hotel in Sofia. Suddenly an American, as big as a bear, in a pilots’ uniform, entered and asked with a strong voice who was the pilot who had shot him down. Troubled, the Bulgarians asked about the date and the circumstances and as he explained, all recognized that the one was Konzov. Konzov also found out, that the question was about him. He was wondering what the American ‘bear’ was going to do - as Konzov himself was not very tall and very thin man. Also, he was not ready for ‘defense’, as he had bailed out in one combat and the American fighters had tried to kill him - fortunately, only a few bullets hit his legs. But nothing bad happened - the American approached, clasped him and ordered drinks for the two of them. Two days later and after unknown number of drinks Konzov returned to the airfield - he did not know even a single English word, so his friends were curious what happened and how the two pilots understood each other. ‘No problems’, Konzov said’ ‘We talked to each other, also I ordered drinks, he ordered drinks...’.

So, I think he deserves one more victory for a shot down fighter.

* Again not my mistake - probably in the mountains the remains of the machine could not be found

 In fact, he attacked one bomber. As his shots were very good, the enemy aircraft exploded in the air. But a second bomber was so close, that it exploded in the same moment, too, damaged by the first explosion.

 This must be the attack with the Avia B-135 - but most other sources say, that the wingman of Atanasov was Yordan Ferdinandov /according to Petar Manolev, Ferdinandov was his wingman, and with Atanasov was Nedio Kolev - for me, this is the truth/

 According to me, seems this victory points were given to the whole orlyak, not to single a pilot/pilots.

 This was a Mustang. In the same combat, a little later, Bonev’s aircraft was damaged and he had to bail out. But the other Mustangs shot and killed him as he was hanging on the parachute.

The Bulgarian Air Force (Vozdushni Voiski) used a point based system as follows:

- for the destruction of a 4-engine bomber and for the shooting-down of a flying alone, not damaged before 4-engine bomber - 3 victories/points;
- for the damaging of a 4-engine bomber - 2 victories/points;
- for the destruction of a 2-engine bomber and for the shooting-down of a flying alone, not damaged before 2-engine bomber - 2 victories/points;
- for the damaging of a 2-engine bomber - 2 victories/points;
- for the shooting down of an already damaged multi-engine bomber and for the shooting-down of a fighter - 1 victory/point;
- or the damaging of a fighter - 0 victories/points.
